CIA IN HOT WATER AGAIN

EDWARD P. MORGAN: "The CIA appears to be in hot water again. It develops that a veteran Agency expert, one Hans V. Tofte, was trying to rent out an apartment in the basement of his Georgetown home. But the men who came to look weren't prospective renters. They were fellow agents in search of classified office documents, Tofte had illegally taken home, allegedly, to study.

"Tofte said he did no wrong, calls the search amateurish, complains that when it was over some nineteen thousand dollars worth of his wife's jewelry was also missing. Now, the Washington police have been summoned and Tofte has been temporarily suspended by the CIA."
